

JURY DRIBBLES

Definitely Located—The Efforts that Were made to Save Bill Elliot's Neck.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 1.—There were sensational developments in the Elliot murder case last night which will likely lead to arrests. It has been indirectly charged that certain members of the jury were approached with offers of money if they would hang the jury, and criticism of three members who stood out for manslaughter has been openly made by the local press. Mrs. Charles F. Peters, the wife of one of the jurors, makes a startling statement, which confirms all the stories which have been told.

Peters is a brakeman on the Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo Railroad, and in his runs has been stopping for the past five years at the boarding house of a Mrs. Moore, at Fostoria. Peters also has a number of friends who stop at the same house and who reside in Columbus. Last Sunday one week in Mrs. Moore came to Columbus and stopped at the residence of Mr. Peters, pretending on her acquaintance with Mrs. Peters as one of her boarders. Mrs. Peters states that Mrs. Moore at once made inquiries as to how and where she could get to see Mr. Peters, and they went together to the jury room, but she was unable to get a consultation with him because of the diligence of the bailiff. She made the request that Mr. Peters come home for supper on the Monday evening following, which was granted, but the bailiff kept such a close watch that she could not get a conversation with him.

Mrs. Moore confided to Mrs. Peters the same day that she had seen a man who said there was $500 in the case for her husband if he would hang the jury. Mrs. Peters refused to listen to the proposition, and was approached by Mrs. Moore a second time on the subject. Mrs. Moore said Mr. Peters would not be alone in accepting the money, as there were others going to do so. Mrs. Moore called on Juror Peters a second time before she left the city, but was unable to get a conversation with him in private.

It is expected the prosecutor will cause the arrest of Mrs. Moore and probably others on the charge of bribery. Prosecuting Attorney Hulme went to Fostoria to-day in advance of any publication in the hope of learning something before the explosion. Mrs. Moore stoutly denied the story as to her efforts, and from the best information the prosecutor could secure the tracks of those interested in the scheme have been well covered. It is the intention, however, to have a thorough investigation made and prosecute the perpetrators if proper evidence can be secured.

The motion for a new trial in the Elliot case was to have been argued to-day, but was postponed to Wednesday.

ROSE COGHLAN'S

How Threw Her Over His Head—She Was Learning to Ride Man-Fashion and Had on Pants.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Miss Rose Coghlan, the actress, dressed in man's clothes and riding man-fashion on the back of a spirited horse, was tossed over the animal's head last night, and came within an ace of landing on a barbed wire fence and of having her face trampled by the horse. Miss Coghlan is spending the summer at her mother's cottage at Fort Hamilton. Next season she is going to appear in a play called "Dora's Dilemma," and at the end of the second act it will be necessary for her to reach a town eight miles away in nineteen minutes. She will be dressed as a dragoon and will call a horse. A gentleman will tell her that he hasn't a side saddle. She will throw all her available dignity into her voice and will reproach him. Then she will leap into the saddle and ride off like a streak.

Miss Coghlan is an experienced horsewoman but she has never ridden man-fashion and to get the termination of that second act down properly it will be necessary to practice. Fort Hamilton is a deserted place at night, so she chose the night to do her practicing. She had a suit of men's clothes made, a cutaway coat and a soft hat and she could be seen any night on the back of her horse prancing about a potato patch in the rear of her mother's cottage. Mr. John T. Sullivan generally accompanied her.

Friday night she took her first long ride. She started on her charger at 8 o'clock, and was gone fully two hours. Mr. Sullivan rode about 50 feet behind her. She was just turning the corner of Marine avenue when one of the Fort Hamilton trains turned the corner. The engine lit out an infernal squeak. The horse reared and Miss Coghlan's hold on the reins slipped. The horse leaped forward and then came down on his knees, and at the same instant jumped his back.

Miss Coghlan shot upward and forward and turned once in the air. Then she sat down hard and fell over on her side. She rolled out of the way of the horse's hoofs. A doctor was summoned and found only bruises.

BEFORE HIS MOTHER.

A Young Bank Clerk, Ill With Grip, Blows His Brains Out in Bed.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 2.—Dabney Alexander, aged thirty-five, corresponding clerk of the State Savings Bank, killed himself in the presence of his mother at an early hour this morning. Last November Dabney had a severe attack of grip and pneumonia, since which time he has suffered from a tendency to mental aberration, at times threatening to commit suicide. This week he had a return of the old attack. About 3 o'clock this morning Mrs. Alexander awoke, and relieved the water by her son's bedside. As she reentered the room after a short absence she saw her son sitting up in the bed with something gleaming in his right hand.

Realizing in an instant what he was about to do, she sprang forward and threw herself upon him, but too late, as the muzzle of the revolver was placed against his right temple, and, pressing the trigger, he sped the bullet through his brain. The young man fell senseless on the bed. The bullet had passed across the head from the right temple and lodged over the left eye. Within twenty minutes after the shooting life was extinct. Alexander was the chief support of the family.

A DUPED CANADIAN.

Two Confidence Men Cleverly Banked Him Out of a Hundred Dollars.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Louis Gauvain, a quaryman from Canada, fell an easy victim to confidence men while passing through the city on his way from Williamsport, Pa., to Fall River. On a Jersey City ferryboat Gauvain met a suave individual who said his name was John Campbell. Campbell came up to him again in Murray street and asked him if he was not going to Fall River. Gauvain said he was, and Campbell volunteered the information that he expected to meet his wife and child in West street, and that they, too, were going to Fall River. While they were walking along a man came up and told Campbell that his wife and child had gone to the boat, as they were tired of waiting.

Finally Campbell showed Gauvain a piece of paper, which he said was a check for $1,000, and asked Gauvain to give him $100 until he could get it cashed. Gauvain consented and gave him the money. Gauvain related his story to the police, and Detectives Flynn and Carey arrested both men. At the Tombs Police Court they were held in $1,500 bail each.

DR. ANSBROOK'S OBJECTIONS

To Wheeling Creek as a Source of Water Supply Restated.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE INTELLIGENCER: Sir:—In your Saturday's paper I again notice that Dr. Ulrich is inclined to try to kick back at my statements. This is all right if done in a proper way. Now, I do not want to say anything in any way that would not become a man in my profession, yet I cannot refrain from trying to impress upon the minds of the people what I know to be the truth. As Dr. Ulrich has added nothing new, and has said, in my opinion, nothing worth repeating or considering, I will just let what he has said, in the spirit in which he has said it, kill itself.

The doctor stated that I was progressive. I am proud to say that when I find out I am wrong I will not, as many men do, still contend that I am right, and seek to hold up that which I know to be wrong. What I do hope is that the people of Wheeling may get the right water and get it soon. They certainly need it, and the people that know something about water are the people to discuss this subject and bring out the truth forcibly and plainly, so the people may know how to decide on this important subject. But in our desire to uphold our own side of the question and make people blind to the truth, we may force upon them an article which they do not need. Previous to my article on the subject, showing the truth about Wheeling creek, had the people of Wheeling taken a vote on this subject seventy-five per cent. of the votes would have been in favor of the Wheeling creek water, simply because they knew of no objections to it, and they had no better plan suggested.

The creek has been recommended to them by men whom they thought ought to know what they were talking about, and I do firmly hope that if Wheeling creek proves to be the one place superior to all others to get water from there it will come from yet.

The question might then arise, how will the people know that Wheeling creek is the place to get water from?

The answer is: when they have proven by good and reliable authority that my statements are not true.

I will repeat them so they may know what to prove:

First—I say Wheeling creek will not supply Wheeling. Prove that it will.

Second—I say that I can find men that have seen the creek nearly, if not altogether, stopped flowing. Prove that I cannot.

Third—I say the soil through which it flows is impregnated with the germs of typhoid fever. Prove that it is not.

Fourth—I say that the poison thrown off from one of the dead bodies lying partially covered in the creek is far more productive of evil and scatters more virus than one entirely covered with water, and that if you construct a dam these dead bodies will wash into it and stay there for months, and being unable to pass the obstruction to the flow of water, the city will get the water off of them direct. Prove that it will not.

Fifth—I say that the dam that they are talking of building will be filled to the top in one season with the filth of the country. Demonstrate clearly that it will not.

Sixth—I can prove that the water turns green and stagnant and from it there comes a peculiar odor, and that during these times the fish die, which is without doubt due to the bad water.

Seventh—I say that you would have to get the authorities of the counties interested in it as well as the State, and that it would be no small job.

An engineer who has run the pork house for Shenck & Sons says that he is certain that he has seen the creek when the paper mill pump would pump it dry, thus confirming the statement of Hanna & Clemans, and you must understand that this creek is larger here than it is fifteen miles farther up.

Now, when the proper authorities have proven that this is all untrue, then I will frankly admit that I am wrong. If some one who knows anything about Wheeling creek, can show any new light and prove that it is the best place, I would like to hear from them.

One thing on surface water Dr. Ulrich says or insinuates that there is nothing but surface water near Wheeling creek. Mr. George Zeeckler, of Fulton, has three distinct kinds of water on a sixty foot lot.

TOOK THE DEPOSITS.

The Proprietor of the "Banca Popolare Italiano" Decamps With the Deposits.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 2.—With outstretched hands and faces contorted with mingled sorrow and anger, over 100 Italian laborers surrounded the closed doors of the "Banca Popolare Italiano," No. 726 South Seventh street, yesterday, and clamored for the return of their hard-earned money. Their appeals were in vain. Louis Mangialetto, the proprietor, had flown, carrying with him all the money of the bank, and leaving behind him two notices pasted on the outside of the door stating that he had made an assignment to Richard S. Green.

Mangialetto has fled with $25,000. Mangialetto is another of those mushroom Italian bankers who, trading upon the credulity of their ignorant compatriots, have robbed them of all they possessed. Twelve months ago Mangialetto was a stone mason and took small contracts from builders with the privilege of hiring his own men, upon whom he levied contributions for obtaining them the employment. Making money rapidly at the lucrative business Mangialetto leased No. 726 South Seventh street, and added to his employment agency the business of a banker. The basement of his banking house was reserved for the sleeping apartment of the men waiting for employment. Sometimes it contained as many as fifty men, who huddled together there in the utmost filth. Before taking a new man under his wing Mangialetto stipulated that he should deposit his savings in the "Banca Popolare" and also pay him a certain sum for securing him work. By this means Mangialetto built up a fair banking business.

The Best Remedy for Cholera Morbus, From the Des Moines Leader.

Some weeks ago a leader man went into a drug store and asked: "What is the best remedy for cholera morbus?" He was told "Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy." The medicine was purchased, and worked like a charm. It proved to be very effective, and since we found by experience in our own household that this particular remedy was of real value, we have not hesitated to speak of its merits as occasion offered.
